Menlo Park, Calif.

This program/project management application is licensed by large owner organizations and used by engineers, contractors, project managers, and suppliers, across the lifecycle of a facility. Unifier is built using a proprietary workflow engine that allows users to automate and integrate existing processes and create a set of workflows custom to the needs of the organization without the need for complicated programming efforts. This has been the foundation for helping Fortune 500 companies, government agencies, and educational organizations create modules for project cost and schedule controls, design and document management, asset and resource management, funding management, and dashboards and reporting, among others. This creates accountability for all actions involved with capital projects.
